CTA CAMPAIGN GUIDELINES

To be meaningful, an election must be free and decided by informed voters.

Every person in the electorate should have a keen sense of ethical conduct. Each candidate, supporter, or voter has a serious responsibility to make the democratic process work. Self-discipline is needed in establishing and maintaining a sense of conduct, and, while difficult, discipline is preferable to detailed rules.

Though lacking in specific rules, ethical conduct need not be a loose or vague concept. Clear, honest, conscientious answers to relevant questions should define ethical conduct in a wide variety of political situations.

Rules and ethical conduct are particularly important to the State Council of Education. It has been entrusted with the formulation of policy leading ultimately to making teaching the pre-eminent profession. Its members, whether working on matters of public or self-interest, must work together. In order to perform its functions, the State Council must be made up of members who differ in points of view, rise above personal differences, and strive collectively to achieve the goals of the profession. Since overzealous campaigning is likely to strain or damage these good relations, every person in the State Council or in a campaign should follow the dictates of ethical conduct and the rules for election campaigning.

GTA CAMPAIGN GUIDELINES (modified during building closures)

All campaigning may be done before school, at lunch, or after school. You may not use your preparatory period or instructional time for campaigning. GTA will post your picture and campaign statement, and up to 2 additional flyers on the GTA website. No campaigning may be done on any GTA sponsored social media groups or pages.
